

University Timetabling relies on complex algorithms to schedule courses and resources effectively. Adding new algorithms or optimizing existing ones could help improve the efficiency and accuracy of the system.